CABIN AIR FILTER
TECHNICIAN'S GUIDE

Q. How can you determine if a cabin air filter is clogged without having to remove the filter?

A. Use an anemometer!

Anemometers are a commonly used tool in the HVAC industry to measure air speed and are effective in determining if the cabin air filter needs replacement without the hassle of removing it from the vehicle for a visual inspection. An anemometer can be purchased for around $20.

The testing process:

1. Turn on the vehicles ventilation system and set it at the highest setting through the dashboard vents.
2. Use the anemometer to measure the air speed. Anything below 9mph indicates that the cabin air filter needs to be replaced.
3. Remove the dirty filter for the customer's review. Tell them that their car's ventilation system is not performing at full capacity due to the clogged cabin air filter.
